MEI Will Exhibit at the NKF-WI Symposium in Madison

Madison, Wisconsin—The non-profit Medical Education Institute (MEI) will exhibit at the National Kidney Foundation of Wisconsin’s 2016 ‘The Changing Climate of Care’ Dialysis Symposium on Thursday, November 10th. This meeting offers up to 7.5 CEUs for social workers, nurses, dietitians, and dialysis technicians.

The symposium will examine aspects of caring for chronic disease patients and care partners, using an interdisciplinary approach. It is especially well suited for patient care technicians who handle many of the frontline behaviors and questions from patients. Topics will include ethical principles, hospitalization, grief and dealing with loss, and much more.

MEI staff will be on hand to talk with attendees about patient care tools and educational resources. These include materials and information meant for both patients and professionals that can be found on Home Dialysis Central, Kidney School, and Life Options.

For a detailed schedule of all workshops and registration information, visit KidneyWI.org. To learn more, call the National Kidney Foundation of Wisconsin office at 414-897-8669.
