MEI Releases NEW Chronic Kidney Disease Education Booklets for National Kidney Month

Madison, Wisconsin—In conjunction with National Kidney Month, the non-profit Medical Education Institute (MEI) is releasing two new educational booklets to help people slow chronic kidney disease (CKD) and improve their health. Staying Healthy (stage 3 CKD) and Living the Life You Want (stage 4-5 CKD) are written at the 6th grade reading level, and can be customized and branded. The booklets can be ordered from MEI via a licensing agreement.

Patient-centered education

Staying Healthy and Living the Life You Want cover topics such as emotional well-being, causes and symptoms of CKD, prolonging kidney function, lab tests, what to eat and what to avoid, exercise, and medications. The stage 4-5 booklet includes options for treatment of kidney failure.

“The information in these booklets can help people with CKD take action to live as well as possible,” said MEI Executive Director Dori Schatell, MS. “We believe that offering hope for a good life despite CKD may help people overcome their fears—and reduce emergent dialysis starts.”

Staying Healthy, and Living the Life You Want were developed for distribution by organizations like healthcare providers, insurers, disease management outfits, and self-insured companies.
